

International NEi Nastran Users' Meeting 2010

May 11-12, 2010, Krakow-Czestochowa Jurassic Highland Chain, Poland

The Polish Jura Chain, also known as the Polish Jurassic Highland or Krakow-Czestochowa Jurassic Highland Chain (Polish: Jura Krakowsko-Częstochowska), is part of the Jurassic System of south-central Poland, stretching between the cities of Krakow, Czestochowa and n. The Polish Jura borders the Carpathian Mountains to the south, including part of the Carpathians of the Slovak Republic and the highland of Central Poland to the north, toward the Swietokrzyskie Mountains (Polish: Góry Świętokrzyskie).

The Polish Jura Chain consists of a hilly landscape with Jurassic limestone rocks, cliffs, valleys and vast limestone formations, featuring some 220 caves. The relief of the upland developed since the Paleocene, under climatic conditions changing considerably. Its main component is a pen plain, crowned by monad rocks, rocky masses that resisted erosion, generated as hard rock on Late Jurassic buildup surrounded by less resistant bedded limestone of the same age. The Polish Jura Chain is visited by roughly 400,000 visitors a year.
